Guessed Better Ball.

Guessed Better Ball.

Somehow or other, whether by intuition, or through that sixth sense which few appreciate and none can explain, the people hereabouts seemed to know that there would be something different offered at the new park. While generally there was an air of expectancy, the fabric upon which this expectancy was built was constructed upon the belief that the new league would be just a little ahead of anything effered in Richmond in the baseball line for many months. How well, or rather how true, the fan had guessed is best told by the hundreds of pleased and exhilarated travelers who made the journey.

exhibitanted travelers who made the journey.

Not a man, or woman either, for that matter, who visited Lee Park yesterday but will say that Richmond is going to receive major league baseball. It isn't so much that Richmond won. The same opinion would hold had Richmond tagged to the short end of the scort. It was that snap and vim and at-t-all-the-time spirit shown. There was no lagging. The players were at the workbench all of the time. They were on the job. An inning ended meant merely another linning to be begun. A man on base melant a man whose count would go into the sum total of achievement. It was not baseball with the hands only, Brains formed a more than perceptible pertien of the performance. The ac-rehearsed. They didn't have to stop nothing so much as a sea of laugh-and wonder what was their cue. They knew, and they picked up these cues in such rapid fashion that the perior formance went as smoothly as if it had been staged for months instead of mere days of preparation.

Good-Natured Crowd.

And what a good-natured crowd it was! How it smiled and then smiled some more! Not that everything was perfection. Indeed, there are many things which must be improved at Lee the visitors. He was out on strikes. So was Gus Dundon, while Adler gave Sox Seyhold his first try with a fly bail reaching nearly to the tence, Not during any other inning were the visitors dangerous. At times some victous swats went to the outer fardens, but O'Harte. Seybold and McFarland were three gathered high means that of the other cannot be three gathered high and one hand stab of a swat ordinarily good for the circuit. Twice the Washingtonians got a man to third, but both times it was after two were out.

For Richmond, the game was won in the first inning. Prout was fooled by Pfeffer, Hoffman was out from the pitcher to first. O'Hare doubled to left, and Sox Seybold was passed.
